The Daily Courant.

Friday, October 12. 1705.

From the Amſterdam Courant, dated October 10.

Turin, September 20.

WE continue our Preparations for making a very vigorous Defence in caſe the French lay Siege to this City. The 15th the Amphitheatre, in which Opera's were preſented, being built all of Wood, is pull'd down; and the Stores of Hay that were in his Royal Highneſs's Stables near the great Baſtion, are remov'd to other Places where 'tis preſum'd the Enemy's Bombs will not reach it. The 16th all Inhabitants of the French Nation were commanded to appear in the great Square before the Court; and thoſe who have Families and Houſes here, were commanded to remove out of this City to any Place in his Royal Highneſs's Territories, Cuneo and Aſti excepted; and others who are not Houſekeepers nor have Children, were order'd to depart his Royal Highneſs's Dominions within a certain Time. The 13th 800 Horſe were ſent out of our Camp towards Alba, to fetch in the Contributions demanded of the Montferrat. Moſt of our Shopkeepers are packing up their Goods and Wares, in order to diſpoſe of them in the ſafeſt Places they can, againſt the Damage they apprehend from a Bombardment.

From the Amſterdam Courant, dated October 8.

Cazal, September 21. To Day ubout 1000 Waggons loaded with Ammunition and other things paſs'd by this Place under a Guard for the Duke de la Feuillade's Camp: And a great many Boats laden with Warlike Stores and Proviſions are gone up the Po thither; that that Duke may have have at hand all things neceſſary in caſe he receive Order from Court (which conſidering the ſmall number of Troops he has 'tis believ'd he will not,) to beſiege Turin. The Duke of Savoy has 8000 Townſmen or Peaſants in Arms, 6000 regular Foot, 1400 diſmounted Dragoons, and 3000 Horſe: He has caus'd an Intrenchment to be thrown up ronnd the Town; 'tis ſtrengthen'd with Redoubts at proper Diſtances, and is well furniſh'd with Cannon: Trenches cannot be open'd againſt the Place till the Aſſailants are Maſters of that Intrenchment. The Eminence call'd the Capuchins is, particularly, well fortified.

From the Amſterdam Gazette, dated October 9.

Milan, September 26. They write from the Camp before Turin, that they impatiently expected the return of the Marquis de Dreux, whom the Duke de la Feuillade has ſent to the Court, to repreſent to the King that he had not Troops enough, and that the Seaſon was too far advanc'd for undertaking the Siege of Turin. That Duke had repreſented this to the King before by ſeveral Letters, but 'tis thought the Marquis de Dreux's oral Remonſtrance will be more prevalent with his Majeſty than thoſe Letters. The Garriſon of Aſti make frequent Excurſions, quite to Alexandria, and generally return back with conſiderable Booty.

From the Amſterdam Courant, dated October 8.

Paris, October 2. The Marſhal de Vauban has advis'd the King not to order the Siege of Turin to be undertaken, becauſe the Duke de la Feuillade has not Men enow to inveſt the Place on all Sides; and therefore the Marquis de Dreux is gone back to the ſaid Duke with Order to ſend 20 Battalions and ſome Squadrons to the Duke of Vendome, and to retire with the reſt of his Troops to Chivas.

From the Amſterdam Gazette, dated October 16.

Paris, October 9. Letters of the 7th from Court, inform us the Duke of Vendome has written to the King, to adviſe the Siege of Turin; aſſuring his Majeſty that far from wanting Troops from the Duke de la Feuillade, he could ſpare him ſome of his to aſſiſt him in that Enterprize; thinking himſelf ſufficiently able to oppoſe any Efforts Prince Eugene may make to relieve that City.

From the Amſterdam Courant, dated October 15.

Paris, October 9. Monſieur de Marignane Quarter Maſter to the Duke de la Feuillade, who arriv'd at Court a few Days ago, is diſpatch'd back agen to Piemont. He brought Letters from the Duke of Vendome, in which he earneſtly preſſes the King to give order for beſieging Turin; urging that without the taking of that City, all the other Conqueſts made in Piemont ſignify nothing; and aſſuring his Majeſty that Siege will not prove ſo difficult an Enterprize as had been repreſented to him. Hereupon 'tis believ'd the King has ſent poſitive Order for that Siege to be begun,

From the Amſterdam Courant, dated October 17.

Paris, October 12. 'Tis advis'd from Piemont, that the Army of the Duke de la Feuillade advan'd the 29th of laſt Month within 600 Rod of Turin. The Marquis de Dreux carried Order from Court for deferring that Siege to next Spring; bnt the Marquis de Marignane was afterwards diſpatch'd with peremptory Orders for beginning it: And accordingly to Day came Letters from that Army, which tell us they were preparing to open Trenches; though 'tis generally apprehended the Duke de la Feuillade will not be able to take the Place, and no General would venture to adviſe the Enterprize but the Duke of Vendome ſingly.

From the Par. Letter and Bruſs. Gaz. Oct. 9. and 13.

Paris, Oct. 9. The Journey of the Marquis de Dreux, and the Conferences the Marſhal de Vauban had with the King upon the different Schemes propos'd for beſieging Turin, gave occaſion to a Rumour that the ſaid Marquis was ſent back with an Order to the Duke de la Feuillade not only to defer that Siege a while, but to ſend to the Duke of Vendome 25 Battalions and 15 Squadrons. But all the Letters that come from the Duke de la Feuillade's Camp are full of the Preparations that are continued to be made for that Enterprize; and 'tis confirm'd that Troops are marching from divers parts for Piemont, with which the Duke de la Feuillade's Army is to be encreas'd by the 10th of this Month to 60 Battalions; bating the 2 Battalions that are ſent from the Army under the Marſhal de Villars, which becauſe of the length of the march cannot arrive till ſome Days after. They write from Fontainbleau that 'tis given out there this Siege is preemptorily reſolv'd on; and they give an ample Account of the Diſpoſitions made by the Duke de la Feuillade for it, viz. That he has caus'd a Line to be made made which takes in ſeveral Caſſines that are fortified with Redoubts paliſaded; that this Line begins at the Caſtle of Lucindo and ends at the Po, and faces the Chivas-Gate of Turin, and that Monſieur d' Orgemont is appointed to defend this Intrenchment with 13 Battalions; that the right Flank of this Line or Intrenchment is cover'd by the leſſer Doria, the Rear by the River Stura, and the left Flank by the Po; that on the right of it near the Caſtle of Lucindo Bridges are laid over the Doria, to keep a Communication with the Army that is to be on the other ſide of that River; that theſe 13 Battalions are however to mount the Trenches in their Turn; and that neceſſary Precauſion is us'd to ſecure the Communication with the Camp of Chivas: That the Marquis d' Eſtain is gone from the Army with the Carabineers and Dragoons, to eſtabliſh Communication with Suza; and that the Brigade of Normandie is march'd towards Rivoli; But that all theſe Troops are to joyn the Army at the Paſſage of the Doria, which is to move nearer to Turin and begin another Line that is to communicate with the former, the Left of which is to be at the Caſtle of Lucindo, and its Right at the Po above Turin: So that the Left of the firſt Line, which is already finiſh'd, and the Right of the ſecond will be cloſe to the Po; and the other ſide of that River will be left quite open. Moſt of the Officers, eſpecially the Ingeniers, think it would be beſt to begin the Attack againſt the riſing Ground call'd the Capuchins; but the Duke de la Feuillade is for beginning it againſt the Citadel: The Marqvis de Dreux has Order from Court to determine that Point. 'Tis adviſ'd there is already in the Camp 70 Pieces of Cannon, twenty four, ſixteen, and twelve Pounders; with 40 Mortars, ſome for Bombs and ſome for Stones; that the reſt was expected from Chivas with the firſt 2 or 3 Convoys that came from thence; and that the Marquis d' Eſtain is to guard a conſiderable Convoy that is ſent with Artillery from Suſa.

From the Paris Letter, dated October 12.

Paris, October 12. Yeſterday the King declar'd at Table, that Turin is beſieg'd, and that the Trenches were open'd the 6th Inſtant.

The Amſterdam Courant of October 10. and the Leiden Gazette of October 13. ſay in an Article from the Camp before Turin, dated September 25, that the famous Imperial Collonel of Huſſars Paul Diack, who was taken Priſoner by the French ſome time ago, and has been ſince kept in Caſal; has put himſelf into the French Service, and thereupon is made General of Huſſars, Major General of the King's Army, and Collonel of a Regiment of Huſſars. But all the Advices that come directly from Paris, have not yet ſaid a Word of it.
